

Timber Mouldings

ON A GRAND SCALE

Specialised mouldings and architectural building products

When it comes to completing your home, there are certain details that will add the perfect finishing touch, taking it from a standard new build or renovation to a bona fide grand design.

Intrim was founded in 1993 by the Quinsey family in Picton, NSW, and has grown to become one of Australia's leaders in finely crafted, quality timber mouldings, skirtings, architraves and handrails for residential homes and commercial buildings.

The company's customers span all sectors, from architects, interior designers, builders and carpenters to residential homeowners who engage trades and DIY renovators. Intrim's product range includes a large selection of timber mouldings and profiles to suit Australian home designs, from luxury mansions to the humble farmhouse or coastal beach home.

Hamptons and French provincial styles have been a major influence in the significant interest in timber mouldings in recent years, however contemporary wall panelling continues to increase in popularity. This is why Intrim has focused on expanding its range significantly, to complement the vast collection of skirting boards and architraves.

Intrim also offer a stunning collection of timber moulding designs for skirting blocks, picture rails, dado rails, chair rails, handrails, inlay moulding for wainscoting, as well as DIY wainscoting kits, timber cornice, sill nosing and more.

Skirting remains Intrim's largest product category. The trend for larger profiles and a greater number of designs has been driven by savvy consumers and designers wanting to create bespoke interiors.

The company's timber mouldings are available in a selection of materials and finishes, from environmentally preferred FSC FJ Pine to MDF, in both primed and un-primed options. Primed is usually preferred, as machine-primed timber seals all sides and saves a lot of time on site and ensures longevity in the home.

After some wall panels to really make your interiors shine? Intrim's extensive collection includes VJ Board Pro, which is a very popular choice right now. Intrim's large sheets provide quick and easy installation.

FJ Pine Lining boards provide a similar look, however these boards are narrower, with a tongue and groove that clip together. Lining boards are perfect for wet areas or places where you want a specific look. They also have decorative finishes, such as the scalloped shape Intrim Cavetto Wall.

Another popular look is using wall battens and decorative timber mouldings such as concave and half rounds. These timber mouldings are suitable for ceiling panelling treatments and are used extensively for decorative features on kitchens and bars.

Based in Picton, on the outskirts of Sydney, Intrim has people on the ground in Melbourne and Brisbane, supplying its products nationwide. An Australian-owned and -operated business, Intrim knows the Australian market and makes all orders in their own plant with state-of-the-art machinery, ensuring a quality finish delivered with quality service.
